

Greetings,

I am writing to state my objections to NPRM 02-230. It seems the good people of the entertainment industry would have us restricting technologies, without a sound impact study on the matter. Could this restrict LEGAL use of video devices, and perhaps limit bandwidth, even damping freedom of speech?

Let's please look at the historical record of their (RIAA et al) demands (cassette

tax?) and "sky is falling" demeanor at the whiff of any new technology. The industry must learn to embrace technology, not pretend it does not exist. Buggy whips anyone

(ref. laws passed to prevent the rise of the automobile)?

Best Wishes,

H. Serang
